

He Rode a Palomino

Reverend Abraham Webber had preached in a large church in Los Angeles until a tragedy tore his life apart. He secludes himself in the vastness of Montana, giving up preaching and leading a solitary existence. Dace Dalton, a rancher and elder in a small church in town, befriends him and convinces him to preach in the local church, but he is also torn apart when his wife disappears and leaves him with three small sons. Tillie Reynolds, another newcomer to town, keeps to herself and refuses any friendly gestures from local folks. The Reverend stops to invite her to church, but is greeted with growls from her German shepherd, the sound of a bullet being pumped into a rifle, and a warning to get off the property. Reverend Webber has to wonder who or what she is hiding from.
